ABSTRACT

Even if an extended HTML document incorporating an extended tag is converted by an HTML editor into a document contrary to the original intent of the operator, an HTML document generation device 3 performs preprocessing on the converted document and restores the document to a state which reflects the intent of the operator. Moreover, the generation device 3 generates a normal HTML document containing no extended tags by searching a database 22 in accordance with the specifications of any extended tags included in the HTML document.